25X1

[] these rejectees are automatically assigned to the labor services. According to an order issued in 1950 by Marshal Vassilevskiy, Minister of Defense, no deferments whatsoever were to be authorized. Men who need only a short time to complete their studies, or specialists practicing their profession, are not deferred.

3.

[] there are two induction periods annually. The first is at the beginning of July, the second at the end of September or the beginning of October. All classes register for the first time in the June which comes closest to their 19th birthday and are called to active service one year later. For this reason some draftees are 19 and others 20 when called to active service. []

25X1

Those draftees who have eight or more years of schooling are called to active service first and form the first increment of each class. After basic training they are sent to officer candidate schools for army or navy, or to NCO schools. Some men from this increment are assigned to the MVD and MGB after screening for intelligence, education and political reliability. The second call of each class in September or October is usually composed of draftees with less than eight years of schooling. []

Leave

10. Army officers have 45 days annual leave plus travel time. [redacted] the commanding officer of the 495th Howitzer Battalion went to the USSR for this length of time in the summer of 1951. [redacted] jet pilots are allowed 60 days annual leave plus travel time. NCOs may receive 10 to 20 days annual leave plus travel time at the discretion of the commanding officer. Enlisted men are not entitled to any leave, but a unit commander has the power to reward an enlisted man with a 15 day leave to the USSR for the following reasons:
- (a) Attaining the classification of marksman. [redacted] a soldier is considered an expert gunner if he can hit all five targets: the regular target with a bull's-eye and four field targets, representing silhouettes of prone, crouching, kneeling and standing figures.
- (b) Exemplary conduct, discipline, neatness and all-around outstanding soldiership.
- (c) Outstanding marks in political indoctrination.
- In case of illness or death an enlisted man may also receive 15 days leave. This kind of leave must be approved by various channels in the Soviet Zone and the USSR. It usually takes from one to two months after the emergency to obtain the approval. [redacted]

Soviet Female Personnel in Germany

25X1

[] there was a large influx of Soviet uniformed female personnel into the Soviet Zone of Germany. Approximately 25 of them were assigned to the 2nd Artillery Brigade in Oranienburg on or about 6 Sep 51.

[] These women, 20 to 25 years old, are volunteers and all hold the rank of private. They draw pay at civilian ratings and have officer status and privileges. They wear the regular Soviet enlisted women's uniform: blouse with shoulder boards and the insignia of the unit to which assigned, skirts, high leather boots, and a round hat with a red star. They are employed in various capacities: waitresses in officers' messes and casinos, typists in orderly rooms, and odd jobs in kitchens and hospitals. They are free to mix with officers and enlisted men but not allowed to associate with Germans. Rumors among the officers, enlisted men, and enlisted women

[] indicated that all German female employees were to be replaced by Soviet women.

25X1

25X1

[] a female senior sergeant assigned as an interpreter to the same unit. The sergeant wore civilian clothes.

25X1

14. Female nurses serve in hospitals throughout the Soviet Zone. They enroll voluntarily in nurses schools in the USSR and after graduation are commissioned in the army as junior lieutenants or lieutenants. They wear the army uniform only for inspection and parades; otherwise they wear civilian clothes. Soldiers do not salute them. Approximately 20 nurses, 20 to 23 years old, were assigned to the 2nd Artillery Brigade. They were billeted in quarters for officer nurses and were allowed to associate freely with Soviet officers and enlisted men.
